UNIVERSITY OF NOTRE DAME

The Law School

Monday Morning Update

April 16 - April 22

Hello Notre Dame Law School,

I hope everyone had a great weekend! As some of you may know, this is my last MMU :((crowd erupts). I have loved sending you my thoughts on everything from Taylor Swift to the new replay screen at the Stadium, but sadly the time has come for me to leave Notre Dame law school and figure out how this lawyering thing is supposed to go.

As I look back on my time at NDLS, I am very grateful for my three-years here and sad that it is coming to an end. A lot of people complain about their time in law school, whether it be about South Bend, the weather, class registration, the two-step login, reading assignments, the cost, etc. and to be honest I have been guilty of complaining about some of these things too. However, when I think about law school and about what life would be like somewhere else I come to the realization that this really is a special place.

If you think about it, every law student ever has complained about some aspect of their lives. Being in law school is just simply a stressful endeavor. No matter where you go, there are going to be some aspects of the school that frustrate you or annoy you. It's just how it is with higher education: it won't ever be perfect. So while you are reflecting back on your time here whenever you are getting ready to graduate, think about these things:

1. The friends you have made here. I honestly have made some of the best friends I've ever had here and I know that holds true for most of you. No other law school can provide the same quality of person that we do. Think about other law students you have met over the last summer or summers. Now think about an entire law school made up of people like THAT. NDLS students are special and I am very thankful for the awesome relationships that have come my years here.

2. How many other law schools can boast having the best Saturday's in the fall? As many of you will, I look back on my time here and think about how awesome it was to have a great football program with a great tailgating scene. It made law school way more fun and brought the school together unlike anything else.

3. How much smarter you got. We have some truly amazing professors that strive to put students over everything else. At other law schools, teaching is a chore that professors have to do in order to get paid. Here, we have professors who take the time to teach you and make sure you are pushing yourself to understand the material you paid for. Plus, know you can annoy your non-lawyer friends in everyday conversation by saying things like "well, have you thought about it this way," or "you know, that's not actually assault." It's a fun party trick.

4. Going to such a beautiful school. Notre Dame's campus is awesome and the law school buildings are awesome. While studying for 16-18 hours in a day is not fun at all (it wouldn't be anywhere), think about how great it was to do it at the library we have or in the Commons or in one of the classrooms. With everything Notre Dame has to offer, it is easy to forget how good you have it until you see another law school or campus. Our law school is SICK compared to others.

Now a lot of you are probably rolling your eyes at me. A lot of you are probably saying things like "bad weather" or "undergrads in the library" or "finding a job was hard." OK, valid complaints, however all of these things still happen at other law schools. There is not a perfect law school that is 70 and sunny all the time, with unbelievable facilities, and job-cannons. And while the weather may be worse here than other places, shouldn't you be in a library studying anyway?

My three-years at Notre Dame have been filled with good times, great friends, many awesome memories, and against all odds, I even managed to get a girlfriend (not to brag). I assume that most of you have similar feelings, and for those who did not have the years they were expecting, I hope that the next ones are better. But in the end, those graduating will be assisting their clients or companies with complex legal problems that you have been trained to solve. You are going to solve these problems well and you are going to have fun doing it. This school is going to be one of the reasons why you are so good at your job and it should be exciting. While your tan may not be as nice as someone who went to USC, or maybe you aren't as knowledgeable about cuisine as someone who went to NYU or UChicago, you're going to be as prepared as them to answer a client's question and you're going to be a person people want to go to for advice because of your character, honesty, and friendliness.

I want to thank you all for putting up with my emails for the past year. It truly has been an honor to let you know when you can get free lunch during the week and update you on my favorite sports teams. I am going to miss all of you very much and will cherish the memories I have made with all of you forever. Go Irish!

Here are a few musings:

1. In the upset of the century, my bowling team didn't win the championship. But "Team Name" (real creative there, gentlemen) won the championship on the final day, over coming a close to 80-pin deficit to capture the crown. The team was made up of Matt Clark, Matt Fitzgerald, Bob Cordiak, Tyler Richards, Robert Lee, Drew Shick, and Joel Freeborn.

2. For the NHL and NBA Playoffs, I got the Winnipeg Jets v. Tampa Bay

Lightning and the Golden State Warriors v. Philadelphia 76ers.

Lots of love,
Drew
